In preparation for the eclipse, we are giving away 1000 special-purpose solar eclipse viewing glasses. It is never safe to look directly at the sun—even if it is partially obscured—except during the brief phase of a solar eclipse known as totality, when the sun is completely and totally blocked. Here are all the ways you can collect a pair of glasses to protect your eyes:

- Constellation Scavenger Hunt: Grab a copy of our constellation scavenger hunt at the Children’s or General Reference Desk and find the objects hidden in the library. When you’ve found them all, bring your sheet back for a pair of glasses.
- Science Trivia: Starting July 1, we’re counting down to the eclipse by posting a science or trivia question every day on our Facebook and Twitter pages (@OremLibrary). Come to a reference desk and answer the trivia question correctly for a pair of glasses.
- August Film Screenings: Our theme for film screenings in the month of August is NASA at the Movies. Every Monday and Friday at 6:30 pm, we’ll screen a space-related movie and give away free glasses to anyone who comes.
- Library Programs: Come to our Eclipse Preparation summer reading program on July 11, our Teen Summer Reading Finale on July 25 (teens only), or our Eclipse Viewing Party on August 21! We’ll give glasses away at each program.

On Monday, August 21, 2017, stargazers across the U. S. will have the rare opportunity to view a total solar eclipse from a 70-mile wide path stretching from Oregon to South Carolina. It has been over 100 years since there has been a total solar eclipse viewable across the continental United States. A total solar eclipse occurs about every 18 months, when the moon completely covers the sun, causing the temperature to drop, the sky to darken, the stars to come out, and the outer atmosphere of the sun, the corona, to be visible for a few minutes.

This summer the Orem Public Library received exciting news—out of 513 applicants across the country, we were selected as one of 75 libraries to participate in NASA@ My Library, an education initiative that increases and enhances science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) learning opportunities for library patrons throughout the nation. The Library has received two NASA Facilitation Kits with hands-on STEM activities and tools, including binoculars, eclipse viewing glasses, ultra-violet light detectors, a green screen backdrop, and a tablet computer pre-loaded with apps, educational games and visualizations. As part of our partnership with NASA, we’ll be holding several special programs that use the NASA kits.

First up is our Eclipse Preparation summer reading program on Tuesday, July 11, where we’ll learn more about the science and stages of an eclipse from Solar System Ambassador Amy Oliver and turn a shoebox into an eclipse viewing box (bring a shoebox from home). On the day of the eclipse, August 21, we’ll have a Solar Eclipse Viewing Party at the Library at 10:00 am. While Utah is not in the path of the total eclipse, we should see a partial eclipse, depending on the weather. We’ll also have a variety of science and space-themed activities to encourage exploring and understanding what happens in the sky. Later this year we’re planning some field trips and stargazing activities for teens, so keep an eye on our calendar and we’ll keep you posted!

LIBRARY MAKERSPACE

COMING AUGUST 2017

There’s nothing we love more at the Orem Library than books, but they are just one of many formats that provide information, including movies, music, art, live performances, workshops, and e-resources. At the end of summer, we’ll be adding one more resource of information to the library—a makerspace! What is a makerspace, you ask? A makerspace is a community learning and creating center that will give people access to creative tools and technology. Here are a few things you’ll find in the OPL Makerspace:

• 3D printers: Have you ever wanted to design your own action figure, game pieces, or hardware components? 3D printers allow you to make your ideas real by printing 3D designs in durable plastic.

• Photography and sound equipment: Want to learn the art of photography? Do you have an idea for a great podcast or web series? The OPL Makerspace will offer cameras, GoPros, and mics for checkout.

• Creative software: What are you going to do with those 3D models, captured images, interviews or music? Use the Adobe Creative Suite, Final Cut Pro, and other editing equipment to refine and publish your work.

• Powerful computers: All of these awesome tools require cutting edge equipment. There will be PC and Mac computers. Now they’re at your disposal.

• Arts and crafts supplies: The OPL Makerspace will feature many traditional tools along with the high-tech. Use our computers and software to design clothes, costumes, or other projects, and use our sewing equipment, paint, brushes, or knitting needles to bring them all together. Want to catch an exclusive sneak peak of the OPL Makerspace? There will be a special Family Maker Fair for families who join the Friends of the Orem Library organization on Saturday, August 26 at 3:00 PM at the library. Interested in becoming a Friend of the Orem Library? Register as a family with a $25 annual donation online at www.oremlibrary.org/friends-of-the-orem-public-library or talk to a librarian. We’ll be providing equipment, but the most important thing a makerspace needs is YOU: the maker. If you think a makerspace is just for tech wizards and skilled artists, think again! The goal of our makerspace is to draw persistent, patient, adventurous people who will experiment with technology and develop habits of problem-solving and independent learning through making mistakes and learning from setbacks and challenges. As you take tutorials, ask questions, and keep learning, you will get better not only at using technology, but at increasing your confidence, self-sufficiency, and ability to innovate and create. Join us and get creative with the OPL Makerspace. We can’t wait to see what you come up with!
